THE CONSOLIDATED SUED,

Lewis Wants Ten Thousand Dollars for the Death of Her Husband. Suit was brought against the Consolidated road yesterday by Anna J. Lewis of East Hartford to recover $10,000 damages for the death of her husband, William J. Lewis, who was killed at Hartford, November 29, 1894. Mr. Lewis was an engineer employed by the New York and New England road, and while running across the Consolidated tracks at Hartford, as it is alleged, according to a signal giving him the right of way, his engine was struck by a Consolidated train, he himself was killed and his engine demol-ished. The suit is brought on the ground that the Consolidated was guilty of negligence. Sheriff Tomlinson served the papers.
